

RESPONSIBILITY

6 Keys to Creating Responsible Students

Building a culture of responsibility empowers students to own their actions, create solutions for improving behaviors, and achieve academic success. The benefits of learning how to self-regulate extend well beyond the classroom and pay limitless dividends. These six essential concepts of Responsibility-Centered Discipline (RCD) work together to help keep students on the road to responsibility.

RCD Delivers Measurable Results

63%
 Decrease in office referrals by Year 3 at a middle school in Corning, NY
40%
 Decline in discipline referrals in Year 1 at an elementary school in Columbus, OH
51%
 Drop in suspensions in Year 1 at a high school in Iola, KS

RCD Training Has Been Implemented in More Than 30 States and Canada.

Traditional Discipline Model

Your job is to make students behave.

A win is when students comply.

"This student's language is inappropriate."

"I cannot let this student win."

Responsibility-Centered Discipline Model

Students need to solve their own problems.

A win is when educators respond appropriately.

"This student hasn't yet learned how to express things appropriately."

"I really want this student to win."
